

Transcript: 2014 Executive Perspectives on Top Risks Survey

Corporate boards and c-level executives are having serious discussions about the variety of risks affecting their organizations executives saying the business environment maybe less risky than it was in 2013 but board members to see things differently strategic risks that affect a company's goals and growth opportunities are viewed as the most severe there's also the real threat of cyber-attacks and for companies in the US health care reform is a significant issue these are among the notable findings have the 2nd annual top risks survey from North Carolina State University's DRM initiative am proud to have any does your organization have a handle on its critical risks this year to learn more download the results of this important data.